早稲田大学の国際日本学 —— その取り組みと特色

米国における日本学の礎を築いたことで著名な角田柳作先生(1877-1964)が所属されていたコロンビア大学は、現在、世界の日本学をリードしています。

その角田柳作先生の母校である早稲田大学は、コロンビア大学との深い交流の歴史を有します。特に近年では、日本文学研究の分野で、国際シンポジウムを開催し、和英のバイリンガル論集(『検閲・メディア・文学 江戸から戦後まで』および『世界へひらく和歌』)を共同刊行するなど、「国際日本学」の名にふさわしい成果を発信してきました。

加えて、2008年度より本学大学院文学研究科は、コロンビア大学大学院東アジア言語文化研究科とのダブルディグリー・プログラムを開始しました。その修了者たちは、最先端の研究を担う逸材として、世界を舞台に活躍しはじめています。

今後は、文学以外の分野へ領域を広げながらこのプログラムのさらなる発展を図り、日本学分野における両校共通の連携校であるUCLAアジア言語文化研究科を加えた3大学を拠点として世界標準の研究教育モデルを全世界へ展開してゆくことをめざします。

About Global Japanese Studies

Global Japanese Studies at Waseda University: Projects and Characteristics

Ryusaku Tsunoda (1877-1964), known as one of the founders of Japanese studies in the United States, taught at Columbia University, a global leader in the field of Japanese studies today. As Tsunoda's alma mater, Waseda University has developed deep ties with Columbia University over the years. Spearheading the notion of Global Japanese Studies, the two universities have recently collaborated in holding international symposiums on Japanese literature, and in jointly publishing bilingual collections of essays: Waka Opening Up to the World (Bensei shuppan, 2012) and Censorship, Media, and Literary Culture in Japan (Shin'yōsha, 2012).

In 2008, Waseda University's Graduate School of Letters, Arts, and Sciences (LAS) established a Double-Degree Program with Columbia University's Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures (EALAC). The graduates of the program are beginning to thrive on the world stage, conducting cutting-edge research. The new phase of the Global Japanese Studies program will evolve with three institutions as its base: LAS at Waseda University; EALAC at Columbia University; and the Department of Asian Languages and Cultures (ALC) at UCLA, with which both LAS and EALAC have partnerships. The program will expand its scope from literature to various other fields in the coming years, and will develop global-standard models of research and education on a worldwide scale.

The program will produce scholars and educators who will lead the future course of Japanese literary and cultural studies on the international stage.

The doctoral program will commence in September 2018, with a master's program scheduled to be in 2021.

Curriculum

■ Coursework

In order to equip researchers and educators with the broad range of knowledge, flexibility in approach, and the wealth of scholarly skills required to become future leaders on the international Japanese Studies stage, two required courses, entitled "Coursework", one each respectively in English and Japanese, are offered in the first year. Although required in the first year, there is the further possibility of participating in these courses from the second year and beyond.

■ Research guidance

Mentoring will be jointly offered by both visiting scholars and Waseda faculty members, primarily in the area of Japanese literary studies but including other relevant fields. The latter will be based upon collaboration between the Global Japanese Literary and Cultural Studies course and the Japanese Language Japanese Literature courses within the Graduate School. Students enrolled in Global-J will have the opportunity to participate in lectures, joint workshops or other scholarly activities with students from the Japanese Language Japanese Literature course. Additionally, externally funded events in conjunction with Colombia University and UCLA will provide the opportunity for the bilingual dissemination of research.
